Stanley Balzekas III walks Thursday through the service area of his family's Chrysler dealership, Balzekas Motor Sales Inc., in Chicago. The dealership, which has been part of the Chrysler family since 1933, is one of 789 dealers Chrysler LLC wants to eliminate. AP

CHRYSLER FILES MOTION TO CLOSE 44 DEALERSHIPS IN ILLINOIS

Associated Press

Chrysler wants to eliminate roughly a quarter of its 3,200 U.S. dealerships by early next month, saying in a bankruptcy court filing Thursday that the network is antiquated and has too many stores competing with each other.

The company, in a motion filed with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York, said it wants to eliminate 789 dealerships by June 9—44 of them in Illinois. Many of the dealers' sales are too low, the automaker said. Just over 50 percent of dealers account for about 90 percent of the company's U.S. sales, the motion said.

Dealers were told Thursday morning through United Parcel Service letters if they would remain or be eliminated. The move, which the dealers can appeal, is likely to cause devastating effects in cities and towns across the country as thousands of jobs are lost and taxes are not paid.

Chrysler spokeswoman Kathy Graham would not comment other than to say the company will notify dealers before speaking publicly. A hearing is scheduled for June 3 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York to determine whether to approve Chrysler's motion.

Don Burk, co-owner of Heritage Chrysler Jeep in Ozark, Mo., said he found out that

TARGETED DEALERS

Included on Chrysler's list of dealerships are:

- » Balzekas Motor Sales Inc. in Chicago
- » Premier Chrysler Jeep in Chicago
- » South Holland Dodge in South Holland
- » River Oaks Chrysler Jeep in Lansing
- » Currie Motors of Forest Park
- » Continental Chrysler Jeep in Countryside
- » Ed Napleton Dodge in Westmont

Chrysler plans to get rid of his dealership when he opened his UPS letter Thursday morning.

"Right now I'm processing the information," he said shortly after reading the letter. "I'm sure I'm going to get with my partner and we'll decide what to do from here."

The dealership, in a city of about 10,000 near Springfield, Mo., is involved in the community, sponsoring sports teams and even buying championship rings for the Ozark High School girls basketball team when it won the state championship several years ago, Burk said.

"If you're a good-sized business, kind of by default you're involved a lot," he said.

Chrysler dealerships aren't the only ones scheduled to get bad news this week. General Motors says it is notifying 1,100 dealers that it will not renew their franchise agreements when they expire at the end of September of 2010.

Chrysler said in its filing that dealers are not competitive enough with foreign brands. Chrysler sold an average of 303 vehicles per dealer in 2008, according to its filing. By contrast, Honda sold about 1,200 vehicles per dealer, while Toyota sold nearly 1,300 per dealer.

Chicago's Beanie Baby bunch

The Beanie Baby folks have done it again. Ty released a shaggy black and white "Bo" (right)—as in the presidential dog. So far, it's super popular. Although the retail price is $4.99, it's going on eBay for well over $100 in some cases. So RedEye just had to go there—we asked our Twitter followers to tell us which Chicago icon or face they'd like to see made into a Beanie Baby. And rather than just print their responses, we thought we'd take a stab at what some might look like. Get all soft and cuddly with RedEye on Twitter at twitter.com/redeyechicago. Jon, Kate drama not that shocking

Jon and Kate Gosselin are clowns in a media circus of their making.

That's what happens when you fail to hang up on morning talk show producers or disperse the paparazzi lurking on your lawn.

And for the love of holy matrimony, turn off the lights and hide behind the couch when celeb mags come calling.

Had any of the above taken place, maybe Kate and her famed asymmetrical 'do wouldn't be on a People cover blaring, "We might split up."

The issue, which hit stands Friday, offers more deets about Jon's alleged dalliance with a twentysomething teacher and Kate's revelation that the couple—which rose to recognition on TLC—has been "privately struggling for months," according to a people.com preview.

Not so privately anymore, Kate.

Instead of telling all to the tabs, the couple should pull the plugs on the cameras.

Televised marriages are tough. Too often, the shows turn into divorce documentaries, a fate the Gosselins, who share eight adorable children, should avoid. Just ask these reality wrecks:

Bobby Brown and Whitney Houston

The bad boy R&B singer and soulful pop princess were both music stars, but at opposite levels of fame (advantage: Houston). Therefore, they faced intense scrutiny when they got hitched in the early '90s. The union only continued to confound the world as Brown became known more for multiple arrests than hits like "Don't Be Cruel." Houston, too, descended from power diva to a seeming candidate for rehab.

But no matter what the tabs or stand-up comedians said, the marriage worked. That is, until Bravo cameras came along and captured the couple on "Being Bobby Brown" (2005). After one season of bickering and a revelation that Brown once served as a human enema for Houston, the couple was kaput.

Nick Lachey and Jessica Simpson

Lachey and Simpson's reality show, "Newlyweds: Nick and Jessica," (2003) started off adorably, with singer Simpson struggling to cook while former boy bander Lachey struggled to curb her extreme spending habits. But the show quickly went from "awww" to awkward. Simpson, though more successful in the studio, came off as ditzy, uber-materialistic and clueless about what marriage meant.

Lachey, though much more relatable than his wife, did himself no favors, occasionally brooding over her higher profile or berating her for foolish comments. To no one's shock, the couple called it quits in 2006.

CORRECTION

A story in Thursday's RedEye mischaracterized how "American Idol" contestant Danny Gokey's wife died. She died from surgery for a congenital heart defect.

Anatomy of a divorce

Marriage of Peterson, Kathleen Savio under microscope

Chicago Tribune

Six days before Kathleen Savio's lifeless body was found in an empty bathtub in her Bolingbrook home, Drew Peterson's lawyer prepared papers telling his client he had been subpoenaed and was to be deposed in his ongoing divorce battle.

Peterson, indicted last week on murder charges in Savio's 2004 drowning death, stood to lose hundreds of thousands of dollars in the divorce from the sale of the couple's home and Sud's Pub, his Montgomery bar, according to court documents. Savio also was going after half of his police pension, which pays $6,000 a month.

Instead of losing a bundle, Peterson got just about everything after Savio's death, including custody of their two children.

The Tribune has learned the state's attorney's office is making a closer examination of the divorce and what was at stake as it prepares for the prosecution of Peterson, who is scheduled to be arraigned Monday.

Harry Smith, the attorney who was representing Savio in her divorce, said this week he has turned over to prosecutors the subpoenas he had issued to Peterson regarding his pension and other financial matters.

Smith, who twice testified before the grand jury investigating Savio's death, said it's his understanding that the county has hired financial experts to determine exactly what the economic loss to Peterson would have been. A state's attorney's spokesman declined comment.

"I'm sure that's what Peterson feared—mostly that she was going to take everything from him," said Sue Doman, Savio's sister.

Savio, 40, was found dead March 1. The trial to settle the distribution of marital assets and child-custody issues was scheduled for April 6, according to records.

Joel Brodsky, Peterson's attorney, said he wasn't worried about the examination of his client's divorce.

"That's a very weak motive because half the people in America get divorced. So that means almost half the people in America have motive to commit murder," he said. "It's not the strongest motive you're ever going to come up with."

Brodsky said he believes the prosecution's case hinges on the state's new hearsay law—sometimes called Drew's Law—which allows certain types of hearsay evidence into court.

Peterson, a former Bolingbrook police sergeant and 29-year police veteran, was already married to his fourth wife, Stacy, when Savio was killed. Although state police concluded at the time that her death was not suspicious—Stacy Peterson provided Peterson's alibi, according to police reports—State's Atty. James Glasgow reopened the investigation after Stacy disappeared in October 2007.

Peterson, the suspect in Stacy's disappearance, is being held on $20 million bond. He has denied wrongdoing.

Peterson's attorney seeking lower bond

Drew Peterson's attorney, Joel Brodsky, said Thursday he is preparing a motion to ask a judge to drastically lower Peterson's bond from $20 million to somewhere between $100,000 and $500,000.

Peterson's arraignment is scheduled for Monday and it's expected that his bond also will be reviewed then.

"I gave this a lot of thought," Brodsky said.

"Somewhere between $100,000 and $500,000 I think would be appropriate. He's probably the best candidate for a bond in a homicide case in Will County."

His reasoning is that Peterson is an Army veteran, has no criminal history, owns personal property, does not have portable income and no sums of money in which he could support himself if he ran. TRIBUNE

Hearsay law invoked in 2005 slaying of girl

The Drew Peterson law, which offers new state guidelines on hearsay evidence, was invoked in DuPage County Court on Thursday when a judge agreed prosecutors could use the statements of a slain girl in the pending trial of her accused killer.

Joshua Matthews, 24, of Maywood, is charged with the 2005 slaying of former friend Sade Glover, 17, in the driveway of her Warrenville home. Prosecutors contend Glover was fatally shot numerous times because she had filed battery charges against him in July 2005 for punching her in the face.

The law, which became effective in December 2008, expanded the use of hearsay statements by murder victims.

The prosecutors want to use Glover's oral and written statements to Warrenville police about the July 2005 battery case to claim at trial that Matthews had a motive to kill her. Knight said that even though Glover did not say she feared for her life or that Matthews had threatened it, her statements make the motive clear. TRIBUNE

What does a kangaroo have to do with the CTA?

The name "Goroo" doesn't exactly roll off the tongue, although it sounds like it might be a Pacific Rim noodle dish.

Goroo (pronounced "go-ru") actually is the morphing of "go" and "kangaroo," implying speed and going from place to place, according to the Regional Transportation Authority, which hopes the public hops on board its new transportation tool.

Goroo.com is a Web site under development that offers commuters with choices to customize the fastest, shortest, cheapest, healthiest and environmentally friendliest itineraries for travel in the region.

The free service does more than integrate the computer-based transit schedules, Web trip planners and service-disruption alerts already offered by the CTA, Metra and Pace.

It provides options for commuting by car as well as driving to parking lots at commuter train stations. It also lets drivers decide whether they want to avoid highways or toll roads.

Perhaps the coolest feature is that goroo.com soon will add walking and bicycling routes to the transit mix, giving commuters a broader range of information to make intelligent decisions about what form of transportation to pick for each trip.

There still are a number of bugs still to be worked out and improvements to be put in place, said Gerry Tumbali, the RTA's manager of engineering and technology who spearheaded the project.

Beware, SUV and other big-car drivers. Goroo also will tell you how many pounds of carbon dioxide will be emitted into the atmosphere based on your travel choice. English and Spanish will be available.

So will Goroo become a household name?

It wasn't the RTA's first choice.

"Some of the names considered were TakeMeThere, TripTopia, TripFusion and GoZipZoom," RTA spokeswoman Diane Palmer said.

But they were rejected because the Internet domain names already were taken or they didn't resonate with focus groups, Palmer said.

Down the road

The Goroo Web site will be expanded in phases to offer additional services, officials said. In the future, they will include:

- >> Providing rates and availability of spaces at some parking garages.
- >> Real-time highway travel times.
- >> Next-bus real-time data from the CTA's Bus Tracker system.
- >> Eventually, next-train updates, based on estimated arrival times at bus stops and rail stations.
- >> Helping to match commuters who want to carpool to work with others using Pace's RideShare program.

Chicago Police Canine Unit Officer Rick King is looking for his 2½-year-old police dog named Bear (inset). ZBIGNIEW BZDAK/TRIBUNE

Missing: Officer's canine in crime

A Chicago Police Canine Unit officer is looking for his animal partner who was spooked by rolling thunder and climbed a fence at the officer's Southwest Side home Wednesday night.

The dog, named Bear, is a German shepherd and has been missing since about 10:30 p.m., said Police News Affairs Officer Laura Kubiak. Bear, who's friendly to both humans and other dogs, has always been afraid of thunder, Canine Unit Officer Rick King, his handler, said.

The dog was last seen at West 103rd Street and Lawndale Avenue on St. Xavier University campus, according to an off-duty Chicago police detective who spotted him running.

King took the dog out into the backyard of his home in the 3800 block of West 109th Street about 10:30 p.m. during a break in Wednesday night's thunderstorms to allow the dog to relieve himself, he said.

Then as Bear started eating, rolling thunder startled him, and he suddenly headed for the corner of the yard where a neighbor's 5-foot wooden fence meets King's fence and climbed it, said King.

DETAILS

Bear, a male German shepherd, is about 2½, black and tan, and weighs about 74 pounds. He has a identification computer chip implant, Kubiak said. Anyone who locates Bear should call the Chicago Police Canine Unit at 312-746-7180, Kubiak said.

"He stopped eating and just took off," possibly headed east, said King, a 22-year-veteran of the Canine Unit.

Bear has always been afraid of thunder, but "whether he thinks he's running away from the thunder, or going to find it and kill it, I don't know," King said.

His advice for people who spot the playful German shepherd: "Feed him some cheese or something and he would love it. And call the police and we'll be there fast."

Man held in attacks

A 34-year-old South Side man charged Thursday in the kidnapping and sexual assaults of four female victims feigned ignorance of their whereabouts as he spent the night with the mother of three of the victims, prosecutors said. Jimmie Smith, of the 7100 block of South Hermitage Avenue, also was arrested on suspicion of sexually assaulting one of those victims in June of last year, authorities said. Three of the victims are sisters, and another victim, 14, is a friend of the youngest sister, prosecutors said.

Dart gives thumbs up to new Craigslist

The new "adult services" section on the Craigslist Web site appears to be an improvement over the "erotic services" category it has replaced, Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart said Thursday. At the request of the Tribune, Dart sat down at a computer in the Tribune news room and perused postings in the new adult category. "The postings are definitely toned down a lot," he said. "My goal was to get the over-the-top stuff off. ... They've done that."

Poker machine tax possible

Gov. Quinn said Thursday he isn't "excited" about it, but remains "open-minded" to a proposal that would tax video poker machines at bars throughout Illinois to raise money for a statewide construction plan. Video poker is one of many possibilities on a growing list of potential new taxes and fees that could pay for Quinn's proposed $26 billion plan to revamp state roads, repair mass transit and build schools. The Illinois House approved video poker legislation earlier this week aimed at raising money for school construction.

Stroger explains unpaid taxes

Cook County Board President Todd Stroger said Thursday that he failed to pay nearly $12,000 in federal taxes because he took money out of a deferred compensation plan and didn't have enough cash to pay the extra taxes on the additional income.

"Every year I file my taxes, file them on time," Stroger said on WVON's (1690-AM) Cliff Kelley. "The year before I just got a bill that was too big for me to handle at one time."

He said that while he was working on proposing a payment plan, the Internal Revenue Service placed a lien on his home. That lien, filed in March, was for $11,668 due to the IRS for 2007.

"I'm paying in installments," Stroger said. "I would never shirk my responsibility to pay taxes."

News of Stroger's failure to pay his entire tax bill used came the day after he decided to block an attempt to repeal the penny-on-the-dollar tax increase enacted last year at his urging.

Economy taking toll on hotels

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Another sign of the slumping economy: vacancy signs posted at Chicago hotels.

Chicago-area hotels saw a 59 percent occupancy rate last week, 14 percent lower than the same week last year, according to lodging industry tracker Smith Travel Research.

Local hotels have been experiencing declining occupancy rates since 2007, the research company found.

The news gets worse for hotel operators: The average daily rate for a Chicago hotel was $125.62 last week, a dip from $141.62 during the same time last year.

However, the number of hotels in the city has stayed steady. As of the end of April, the Department of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection counted 151 active hotel licenses in the city, said department spokeswoman Efrat Stein. There were 153 licenses in 2008 and 152 licenses in 2007, Stein said.

Hotels are not a luxury that can be enjoyed citywide. Many are concentrated downtown, near Midway and along the lakefront north of Fullerton Avenue.

Stein said the location of the hotels is related to the demand for inns and zoning restrictions about where a hotel can be built.

Hotels are permitted in downtown commercial areas, Stein said, but hotel operators must seek a special-use zoning permit to build outside of downtown.

These operators must notify residents within 250 feet of the proposed building site. The residents have the opportunity to object to the hotel at a zoning board hearing, Stein said.

Besides zoning board approval, a hotel also must pay $165 for a hotel license, which is renewable every two years. Each hotel also pays $2.20 to the city per room. Hotel operators must secure a separate license if they plan to serve liquor, and they face annual inspections by the city buildings department.

RedEye looks at the Chicago hotel industry by hotel licenses issued. TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM

● The map shows the locations of all the licensed hotels in Chicago, as of the end of April.

OCCUPANCY RATES

A look at Chicago's average yearly hotel occupancy rates, according to Smith Travel Research.

HOTEL VS. BED-AND-BREAKFAST

In Chicago, there's a clear difference between a hotel and a bed-and-breakfast.

The city defines a hotel as a commercial establishment in which seven or more sleeping accommodations are offered for rent. A bed-and-breakfast is defined as any building in which 11 or fewer sleeping rooms are available for rent or for hire for transient occupancy by guests. Guests do not include members of the owner's family.

The hotel license costs $165 plus $2.20 per room, while the bed-and-breakfast license costs $400.

Both are subject to building inspections when there's a complaint.

Unemployed to get free meds

Pfizer to offer 70 top prescription drugs

6 TRENTON, N.J. Pharmaceutical giant Pfizer says it will provide 70 of its most widely prescribed prescription drugs—including Lipitor and Viagra—for free to people who have lost their jobs and health insurance.

The world's biggest drugmaker said Thursday it will give away the medicines for up to a year to Americans who lost jobs since Jan. 1 and have been on the Pfizer drug for three months or more.

The move could earn Pfizer some goodwill in that debate after long being a target of critics of drug industry prices and sales practices.

The program also likely will help keep those patients loyal to Pfizer brands.

The idea for the program came just five weeks ago, at a leadership training meeting, as the workers discussed how many patients are struggling, said Dr. Jorge Puente, Pfizer's head of pharmaceuticals outside the U.S. and Europe and a champion of the project.

Applicants will have to sign a statement that they are suffering financial hardship

HOW TO SIGN UP

Patients can call a toll-free number, 866-706-2400, to sign up. Starting July 1, patients also can apply through the Web site, pfizerhelpfulanswers.com, which has information about other Pfizer aid programs.

and provide a "pink slip" or similar employer notice. Applications will be accepted through Dec. 31, with medication provided for up to 12 months after approval—or until the person becomes insured again.

2 New Hampshire Gov. John Lynch said Thursday he will sign a bill to make his state the sixth to legalize gay marriage, but only if the already-approved legislation is revised to strengthen protections for churches and people who worked for them.

Hubble gets new camera

3 A pair of spacewalking astronauts overpowered a stubborn bolt and successfully installed a new piano-sized camera in the Hubble Space Telescope on Thursday, the first step to making the observatory better than ever. Astronauts John Grunsfeld and Andrew Feustel had trouble removing the old camera from the telescope because a bolt was stuck.

Civilians flee fighting

4 Thousands of civilians waded across a vast lagoon under a hail of rebel gunfire Thursday, breaking out of Sri Lanka's war zone in a mass exodus that left four civilians dead from Tamil Tiger bullets, the military said. In the tiny coastal strip they had just fled, unrelenting shelling forced health workers to abandon the only hospital in the area.

House OKs war funding

5 The House has approved $97 billion for military and diplomatic efforts in Iraq and Afghanistan. The measure also would pay for anti-flu programs and for additional cargo planes the Pentagon doesn't want.

THE DIGIT 10 feet

The amount the global sea level will rise if the West Antarctic ice sheet collapses. While that may not sound so great to residents of coastal cities such as New York or L.A., it's only about half the previously predicted rise. Researchers report their recalculation of the hazard in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

Tornado touches down

7 KIRKSVILLE, Mo. A firefighter checks a home that was hit by a tornado Wednesday. Police Detective Sgt. Ron Celian said about 30 to 40 homes in the city were damaged, one was destroyed and an auto dealership was significantly damaged. Two people were injured near the dealership when their car was blown off the road, Celian said. AP

Pelosi says she was misled about use of waterboarding

8 WASHINGTON

Under strong attack from Republicans, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi accused the CIA and Bush administration of misleading her about waterboarding detainees in the war on terror and sharply rebutted claims she was complicit in the method's use.

"We were told specifically that waterboarding was not being used," she told reporters, referring to a formal CIA briefing she received in the fall of 2002.

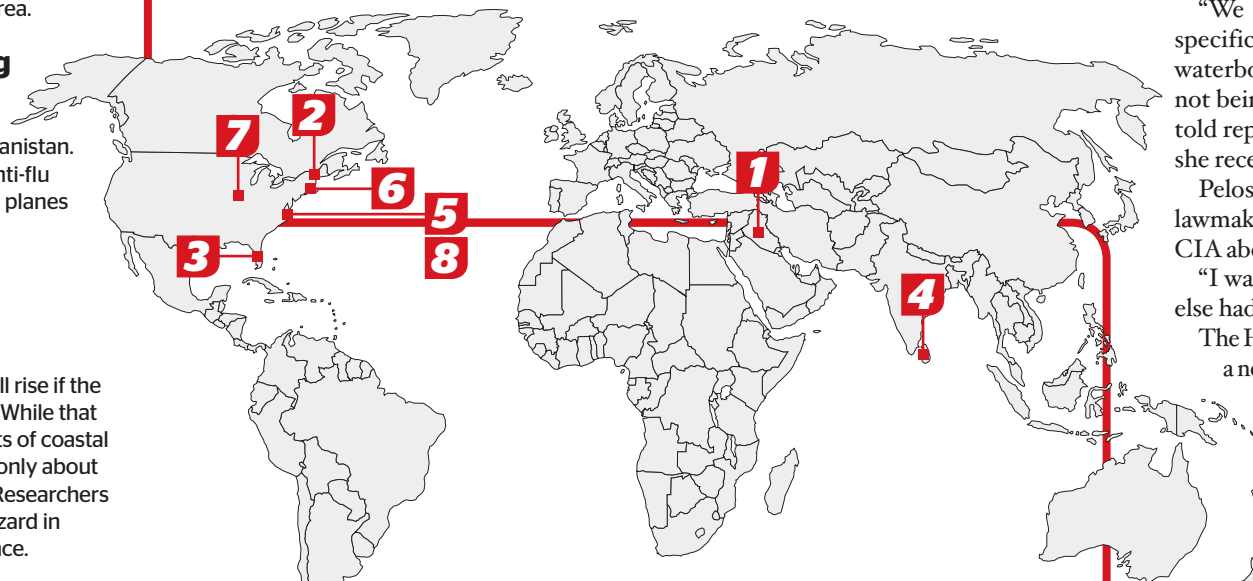

Pelosi said she subsequently learned that other lawmakers were told several months later by the CIA about the use of waterboarding.

"I wasn't briefed, I was informed that someone else had been briefed about it," she said.

The House's top Democrat made her comments at a news conference in Washington where she was peppered with questions about her knowledge of a technique she and others have called torture. Republicans have insisted in recent weeks that Pelosi and other Democrats knew waterboarding was in use but made no attempt to protest.

Nancy Pelosi claims the CIA and Bush administration said waterboarding was not being used. AP

Kane still is on fire after his Game 6 hat trick against Vancouver, scoring two more against Red Wings goalie Chris Osgood. What a slacker. We aren't gonna stand for anymore of this two-goals-a-game stuff. Bring it on, St. Patrick! You've got a reputation to uphold.

FINALS EXAM

The Blackhawks are in the conference finals, and Whizzer is in a predicting mood

By Whizzer

Folks, we are in uncharted waters. The Blackhawks are in the Western Conference finals for the first time in my lifetime. Even when you factor in dog years. That's gonna make my job predicting this Blackhawks-Detroit Red Wings series that much harder.

Eh, who am I kidding? I am bulletproof after correctly predicting Patrick Kane's second-round hat trick. That's right, I said it.

The series starts Sunday in Detroit. Times and broadcast schedules were not available at press time, but here's what I see unfolding.

txtable

HOW TO PLAY

Here's where you, readers, come in. Text "whlz" followed by your predictions to 87708. Don't forget to include your name and neighborhood. Whizzer just might give you a shoutout in a future edition of RedEye.

Khabibulin
GETTY IMAGES

If any of you Blackhawks fans take a road trip to Detroit and see Eminem hanging around, tell him Whizzer said he is a punk. Don't worry, he'll know who I am. I beat him in a rap battle back in the day. As for the game, it's kind of a snoozer. Kiddies Kane, Jonathan Toews and Kris Versteeg need a sugar jolt or something. The Red Wings punish Nikolai Khabibulin, who has more pucks flying at him than Zac Efron has screaming fans. Me included.

Score: Detroit 3, Blackhawks 0 Series: tied 1-1.

Franzen

GAME 3

Blackhawks fans are in a frenzy as Game 3 begins. Red Wings winger Johan Franzen quickly silences them with an early goal, and another, and ... no, there will be no hat trick this time. Unless it involves Martin Havlat pulling a rabbit out of his helmet.

Score: Detroit 4, Blackhawks 3
Series: Detroit leads series 2-1.

SCOTT STRAZZANTE/

This'll be a rough one. Which means lots of action for Dustin Byfuglien. Like he did against Vancouver, Buffy, as I like to call him, makes things difficult for the opposing goalie. The fired-up Hawks score early and often—cruising to their first conference finals win at the United Center in who knows how long.

Score: Blackhawks 6, Detroit 2 Series: tied 2-2.

Sharp

GAME 5

It's back to Detroit, and no one's happy about that—not even some of the Red Wings. Why? Because they have to wear those all-red uniforms that resemble jailhouse jumpsuits. Think Drew Peterson in all his smug glory. The Hawks' Patrick Sharp is the hero of this game, winning it late with a short-handed goal.

Score: Blackhawks 4, Detroit 3 Series: Blackhawks lead 3-2.

Campbell
SCOTT STRAZZANTE/
TRIBUNE

GAME 6

At this point in the series the players' playoff beards are getting pretty haggard. Don't they trim these things? Case in point, Brian Campbell and his fire-red beard. It's a little patchy. He needs to throw some Scotts Turf Builder on there to even it out. B-Camp and Toews team up to score four, but the Wings prevail at the UC.

Score: Detroit 5, Blackhawks 4 Series: tied 3-3.

GETTY IMAGES

GAME 7

Game 7, at Detroit. You knew it would come to this. Big hits. Huge goals. Roaring crowd—until the Blackhawks shock the defending champs. Do you believe in miracles?

Score: Blackhawks 3, Detroit 2 Series: Blackhawks win 4-3.

Nice to see you again, Hawks

The roar ... has been restored.

Time to eat some ... bird feed. I didn't think the Blackhawks could do it. No way they come this far, this fast, but they have. Now, I can't get that song out of my head ... the one they play when they score. It also compels me to get an Amstel Light—and that's a problem.

They're here: The Western Conference finals. Let's rejoice in the moment. We're back from the brink, the crowds at the United Center make me remember the Chicago Stadium on a cold winter night.

Just a quick review here: The last time they won the cup, it was 1961. That's pre-Cuban Missile Crisis, people. That's prewar, really. You pick the war. Now, I don't want to complain ... except that I do. Forty-eight years! Entire industries have been born, thrived and tossed aside by the brutal machine of capitalism.*

We still made pretty good cars the last time the Blackhawks won it all ... we still had newspapers back then. TV was free ... you get the point. Here's the best part: These Hawks are going to be around for a while. I'm just glad Pat Foley is back to call the action ... a guy like that should never have gone away in the first place.

Speaking of first place, our White Sox aren't there.

Jose Contreras has been sent to the minors to work on some things. That would be fine, if he weren't 50 years old. Ozzie, Kenny, Jose: I'm sorry, it's over. Jose was awesome in 2005, but it's been downhill ever since. Time to go young.

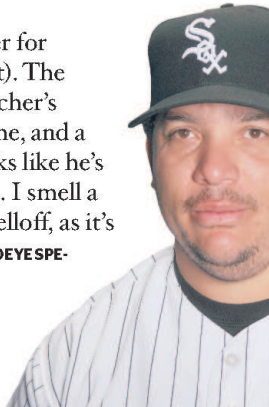

It may also be over for Bartolo Colon (right). The round mound of pitcher's mound (my nickname, and a bad one at that) looks like he's seen better days too. I smell a trade coming, or a selloff, as it's known. BAG BOY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Fighting chance

“Chicago has not yet established itself as a home to mixed martial arts,” says Bjorn Rebney, who might help change that Friday night when he brings Bellator Fighting Championships VII to the Aragon.

Headlining bouts Dave Menne vs. Omar De La Cruz and Jorge Ortiz vs. Lyman Good are part of an ongoing, single-elimination tournament for a $100,000 purse. The undercard features seven non-tournament bouts.

Local pros Ryan Williams and Kevin Knabjian fight—in separate matches—on Friday’s undercard.

Both have collegiate wrestling backgrounds. Both complement that foundation with boxing, muay Thai and jiu-jitsu techniques. And both fight at 170 pounds.

Bridgeport resident Knabjian coaches wrestling at alma mater St. Laurence High School and bounces at city nightclubs, where chokeholds can come in handy. He said he once choked out (bringing an opponent to the point of unconsciousness) an unruly patron at Joe’s Bar.

A Missouri native transplanted to Lincoln Park, Williams works as a personal trainer when not training himself. The business-school grad, 28, has never been in a serious fight outside of the cage.

This week, the Tribune talked to the two, on the phone, in separate interviews:

MMA BELLATOR FIGHTING CHAMPIONSHIPS

When: 7 p.m.

Friday

Where:

Aragon, 1106 W. Lawrence Ave.

Tickets:

starting at $25 available at the box office and Ticketmaster outlets

Kevin Knabjian

Ever worry about an opponent you’re choking out?

Williams: No. That’s just the name of the game. I wouldn’t expect them to feel bad for me. It happens in training all the time.

Knabjian: Never. For as crazy as this sport seems—even though you’re putting somebody to sleep—there are very few injuries.

What does it feel like to get choked out?

Knabjian: It’s a very weird feeling. You’re just fighting and the next thing you know somebody is waking you up.

Yours is labeled the “ground and pound” technique.

Williams: I prefer to be on the top position, striking my opponent on the ground. The opposite of that would be Brazilian jiu-jitsu, where you can fight from your back.

Injuries?

Knabjian: I haven’t had too many. I broke a dude’s arm once. I put him in a Kimura [arm lock that torques the shoulder] and all of a sudden his arm bent in half. I kind of wanted to puke.

Ryan Williams

CUBS 11, SAN DIEGO 3

Ryan Dempster (left) pitched seven innings and drove in two runs in an 11-3 rout over the Padres. After the game, MLB announced Milton Bradley’s two-game suspension was reduced to one game.

» Danilo Di Luca of Italy retained the overall Giro d’Italia lead, Lance Armstrong lost time again and Michele Scarponi won the sixth stage on Thursday. Armstrong was 1:15 behind.

Saturday

» Day that Derrick Rose will appear from 2 to 4:30 p.m. at the Adidas store at Water Tower Place to celebrate his T-Mobile Rookie of the Year with fans.

» Michael Phelps returns to swimming Friday » Bode Miller: I’ll ski next season » Darius Miles charged with possessing marijuana

TOPIC	 JIMMY GREENFIELD jgreenfield@tribune.com	 PHILLIP THOMPSON plthompson@tribune.com	 TRACY SWARTZ tswartz@tribune.com	 SUPRIYA DOSHI sdoshi@tribune.com	 ED MLAKAR redeyesports@tribune.com
1 If you can't be there in person, what's the best way to watch a Blackhawks game?	In the third person. At least that's what Jimmy thinks.	Sitting in the lap of Luxury, who's currently touring local gentleman's clubs.	Much like Zac Efron, I'll be covered in face paint.	This question would've been harder back when they weren't on TV.	At Jimmy's place ... he's got bourbon to drink and hookers for intermissions.
2 What song would you have played over the PA when you scored a hockey goal?	"The Thermos Song."	Well, I was saving this for my funeral, but "Baby Got Back."	"Olde Tyme Hardcore" by Slapshot. Who doesn't love puck rock?	The Spice Girls, "Spice Up Your Life." Imagine hockey fans singing along—see? Funny.	"Just My Imagination" by The Temptations. No explanation needed.
3 The White Sox play one of baseball's best in Toronto this weekend. How will that go?	It's baseball, anything can happen. But this is an awful White Sox team, so it won't.	The older Sox will defect to Canada for the health-care benefits.	It'll be hard for the Sox to overcome the power of B-Jays.	Not well. The Hawks already claimed Chicago's win over Canadians.	If a couple of the players can find some slump-busters, they will do just fine.
4 With the Cubs near the same record as last year, what reason do fans have to panic?	Aramis hurt, Big Z hurt, bullpen blows, bench is thin, rotation disappointing, Cards and Brewers playing great ...	How about two pitchers have higher batting averages than Derrek Lee and Milton Bradley?	I'm sorry, I don't curse in print.	I think we can all figure this out.	They're Cub fans, what reason DON'T they have to panic?
5 What happens during Bump Day at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway?	I lose my virginity, and Tracy begins a lifelong addiction to cocaine.	It's held at a racetrack in Indiana, so are you sure it's not Bum Day?	Congenital birth defects.	All I can picture now is people chest-bumping in the stands ... hehe.	Danica Patrick tries to pick fights with the other drivers.

Chicago Mayfest

Ashland and Barry
Avenues. 773-665-4682.

Kick off fest season with party bands Hairbangers Ball (Friday), Too White Crew and 16 Candles (Saturday), and Maggie Speaks and Mike & Joe (Sunday), plus a pet parade (noon Sunday) and plenty of beer, food and shopping. 5 p.m. Friday; 10 a.m. Saturday-Sunday. $5.

75th Anniversary Weekend

Lotties Pub, 1925 W. Cortland Ave.
773-489-0738.

Get $6 32-ounce domestic drafts and 75-cent Miller Lite drafts (Saturday only) and don't miss a flip cup tourney (8 p.m. Friday) and complimentary food buffet (1-3 p.m. Saturday). 11 a.m. Friday-Saturday. No cover.

Modern Wing Grand Opening

Art Institute of Chicago
111 S. Michigan Ave.
312-443-3600.

See just what $283 million can buy. Formal activities (9 a.m. dedication, 10 a.m. ribbon-cutting ceremony) give way to live music and dance (11 a.m.-5 p.m.) throughout the galleries and along Monroe Street.

Pug Dog Millionaire

Joe's, 940 W. Weed St. 312-337-3486. Come with or without your pooch (pugs only, please) for a canine costume contest and more at Pugmaster Ben Friedman's annual spectacle. $7.

Great Chicago Places & Spaces

Chicago Architecture Foundation, 224 S. Michigan Ave.
312-744-3315.

Registration opens at 7:30 a.m. for about 70 guided tours of city architecture powered by foot, bus, boat, train, trolley and—the most popular option—Segway.

Third anniversary party

Frasca Pizzeria, 3358 N. Paulina St. 773-248-5222.

It's the holy trinity of deals: $3 drafts, $3 two-ounce wine pours and $3 off pizzas all day. 10 a.m.

90 Miles Cuban Cafe

2540 W. Armitage Ave. 773-227-2822
When this larger sister spot to the original 90 Miles opens in Logan Square in early June, it will have a sizable back patio sporting 15 tables and hand-painted murals of mid-century Cuba. Cuban sandwiches such as media noche and guajirita ($6.50 each) are just right for summer snacking. Drinks: Hit Bucktown wine shop Red & White (1861 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-486-4769) for a bottle of Goulart Classico ($12). This softer-style malbec, sans oak with hints of stainless steel and cracked black pepper, is perfect for Cuban fare.

Blue Elephant

1235 W. Devon Ave. 773-262-5216
This tiny French-influenced Thai spot in Rogers Park has outdoor seating for 20 on a flowery sidewalk cafe where you can graze on specialties such as salmon green curry pasta ($12.95) and jungle shrimp ($13.95). Drinks: Swing by Jarvis Square's Taste Food & Wine (1506 Jarvis Ave. 773-761-3663) for a bottle of Huber "Hugo" ($11.99), a gruner veltliner that should play nicely with complex Thai flavors.

Cafe con Leche

1732 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-342-2233
Bucktown's tiny corner Mexican-Cuban-Puerto Rican spot doubles its size when the partially canopied side patio for 30 is open. Fans are being installed soon so you can enjoy inexpensive eats such as pan-fried tilapia tacos ($11) outdoors without roasting even on the hottest days. Drinks: Head to Olivia's Market (2014 W. Wabansia Ave. 773-227-4220) for summer wines straight outta the cooler. A bottle of Charles and Charles rose ($11.99) or chenin blanc from South African winery Kanu ($10.99) is perfect for sidewalk sippin'.

Undercover BYOB

Elegant Gold Coast eatery Eve (840 N. Wabash Ave. 312-266-3383) has a full bar, but on Wednesdays, the contemporary American spot permits BYOB with no corkage fee. Pick up a summery bottle at the Gold Coast Goddess and Grocer (25 E. Delaware Pl. 312-896-2600)—we like the food-friendly Now and Zen ($12), an Alsatian white in which honeyed apricot meets wet stone and delicate spice—and hit the chichi 30-seat sidewalk cafe. E.O.

By Erin Osmon

Warm weather has finally arrived, and we can't wait to reunite with our one true summer love: al fresco dining. While these six spots had us at "outdoor seating," their BYOB status and proximity to great little wine shops where you can pick up a summery bottle sealed the deal.

smoked ribs ($21.95) or a whole chicken dinner ($13.50) with homemade barbecue sauce.

Drinks: Stop by Provenance (2312 W. Leland Ave. 773-784-2314) for a selection of sustainably produced wines at prices that won't break the bank. With zero oak to clash with the spice, Rayun Chilean syrah ($10.99) is a great barbecue wine.

M. Henry

5707 N. Clark St. 773-561-1600
This brunch hotspot near the Andersonville-Edgewater border expanded its outdoor seating last summer. The garden patio is a beautiful refuge from the city, and the 60 extra seats help curb crowds that form on the weekends for favorites such as lemon raspberry brioche French toast ($8.50). Drinks: Make Andersonville's In Fine Spirits (5418 N. Clark St. 773-506-9463) your pre-brunch stop for sparkling wines for mimosa-mixing or a light rose such as Murphy's Law ($13.99) from Washington State's Owen Roe Winery.

Liquid sunshine

The summer al fresco scene is about to heat up at these BYOBs

La Palapa

2000 W. 34th St. 773-376-9620
Life's a beach at this Mexican seafood restaurant in McKinley Park where palapa-style thatched umbrellas and tropical tunes re-create your last resort vacation. Limey ceviche ($6-$10) and seafood platters ($23.95-$35.95) complete the south-of-the-border vibe. Drinks: Nearby liquor store options are limited, so it's worth going out of your way to the University Village location of Lush Wine and Spirits (1257 S. Halsted St. 312-738-1900) for a bottle of crisp Protos Spanish verdejo ($14). Feeling adventurous? Try some txakoli ($23.50), a dry white Basque wine that's so acidic it's effervescent.

Smokin' Woody's

4160 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-880-1100

Black metal hippies

Chicago Tribune

Wolves in the Throne Room are as metal as the name implies, but this band is more than a band, or at least far from being a typical band—tossing back the brews and sleeping off a hangover in the back of the van as it rumbles down the road to the next gig.

Wolves in the Throne Room

When: 8 p.m. Saturday

Where: Bottom Lounge, 1375 W. Lake St., Chicago

Tickets: $12-14 (18+); 312-666-6775 or ticketweb.com

The quartet's sound—as progressive as its lifestyle—is gorgeous and enthralling, weaving elements of ambient experimental and folk into its extreme heaviness. On the eve of a lengthy tour supporting the band's latest album, "Black Cascade," drummer Aaron Weaver discussed how the band lives and rocks and slaughtering goats (for all the right reasons).

Where do the musicians call home?

A 1910 farmstead outside of Olympia, Wash. They reclaimed and rebuilt a dilapidated barn and other structures, where the band now records, has shows and lives.

Is it true they are living off the grid?

"That's just a rumor. We have a DSL connection. We use power. We're anxious to move away from that and convert to solar power."

Are handy skills a requirement for band members?

Wolves in the Throne Room

"When we were looking for a new guitarist, we had a pros and cons list, and Will is a shade-tree mechanic, a handy guy all around—that was a big factor—so I'd say yes."

Who are their biggest influences:

Anarcho-primitivism, Swedish black metal bands of the '90s and American underground metal legends, Neurosis.

How do those influences show up in Wolves in the Throne Room?

"All of those things, there is a radical critique of modernity. There are ideas of going back to the land—but it's extreme culture without the hippie ideal. Peace and love and rainbows—that doesn't resonate with me."

What's the big difference between the West Coast black metal scene and the Scandinavian bands that inspired them?

"The main difference was those bands were explicitly satanic; folks were genuinely pursuing left-hand path magic. West Coast black metal, the satanic spirit isn't a part of it."

Wolves in the Throne Room's official party line on Satan:

"Worshiping Satan isn't worthwhile or very intelligent."

What's on the horizon for WITTR after this tour?

"We have been doing music so much we disconnected from homesteading. We are really committed to living in a rhythmic sort of rural way, and there's so much to learn. I feel like every day I am on tour I'm not learning new skills I need to learn, so I'm excited to get home from tour in July—it'll be about time to slaughter some of our goats, and harvest time, so we can get to work canning and preserving food."

Impressed & inspired

Chicago Tribune

You know "American Idol" has done its job when it impresses a guy like Keith Urban.

"I was watching 'American Idol' the other day and that Adam guy did that song from 'Saturday Night Fever,' 'If I Can't Have You,'" Urban said. "But he did it as a ballad, as this aching torch song. And I was blown away."

In a call from Nashville before his major cross-country tour kicked off, Urban talked about everything from the songs he'll belt out to the instruments he'll sling at his coming Allstate Arena show.

The Mini Maton guitar that Urban said he has been "beating to hell for the past two years" won't be making the trip this time, but he has had an Australian luthier build him a newer, slightly larger one.

Then there's the custom-crafted Telecaster electric guitar that was inspired by Urban's lust for the guitar that Kiss' Paul Stanley played. "Growing up, I was always mesmerized by his guitar," Urban said of the instrument known as the Mirror Ball Iceman. "So we reached out to the guy who'd made one for Paul so we could do a Telecaster with that same look. Like broken pieces of mirror all over it."

OK, but does it sound good? "You'll be blinded into thinking it sounds good."

Take it off

There are a few events in the U.S. where at least partial nudity is encouraged.

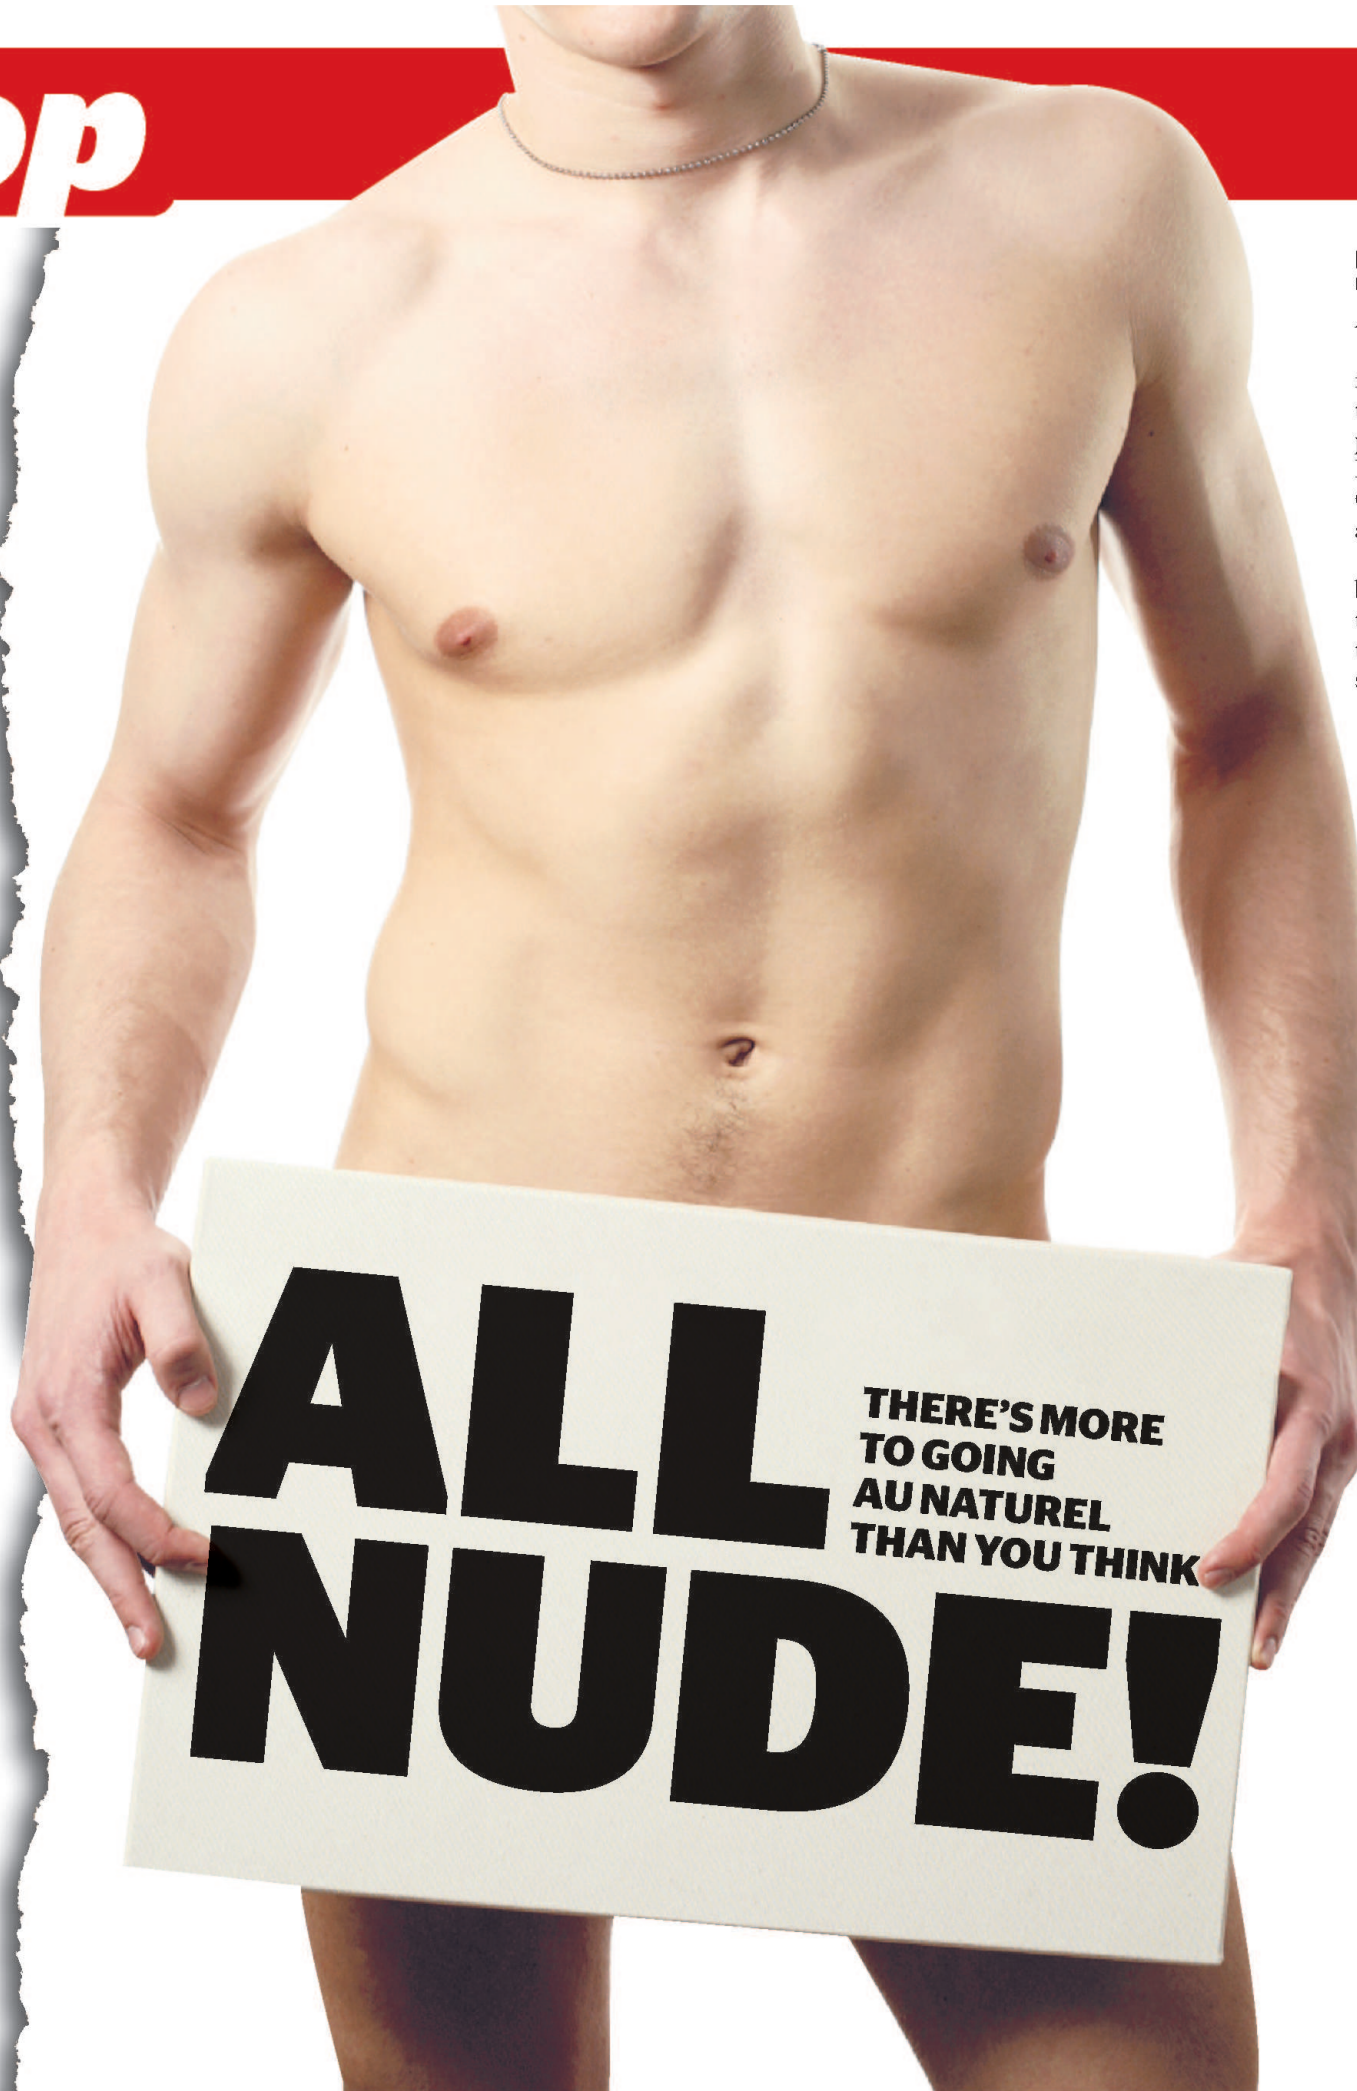

Jan. 10: Improv Everywhere's No Pants! Subway Ride originated in New York eight years ago and has been held in Chicago for the past three years. It aims to shock but not offend. Participants ride the train in underwear but not pants.

June 13: The World Naked Bike Ride in Chicago protests oil dependency and promotes cycling and having a positive body image.

Aug. 23: National Go Topless Protest Day by gotopless.org pushes for women to have the right to bare their chests as men do in public places. Last year women in New York and L.A. participated.

Aug. 31-Sept. 7: The Burning Man festival at Black Rock Desert in Nevada has theme camps on site in which nudity is welcome.

October: The Naked Pumpkin Run started in 1999 in Colorado and has expanded to other cities on the West Coast.

REDEYE

Au naturel is apparently en vogue.

Beauty magazines traditionally known for showing off fashions, not skin, have in the past month gone wild with revealing photos of celebrities. Supermodel Gisele Bündchen, actress Mischa Barton and "Top Chef" host Padma Lakshmi all bare their assets in the May issues on newsstands.

While it's OK for stars to model in their birthday suits, what about you? The question of when and where it's acceptable for the average Joe or Jane to be naked isn't so simple to answer.

Sleeping? Fine. Showering? Yes, please. Getting it on? Of course. Ditto for places like changing rooms, spas and even art class ... if you're the nude model.

In other places, however, it can be risky and awkward to let it all hang out. Or, for some people, it can be freeing, fun and daring.

Yvonne Sepos, 22, of Uptown rode topless in the World Naked Bike Ride in Chicago last June and has accepted dares to race naked around the block and roll naked down a snow-covered hill.

"My group of friends, we're comfortable just being naked and running around. It's kind of funny," said Sepos, a pastry chef. "[But] we're on vacation, we're at a party—I just wouldn't walk around naked around my friends on a normal day."

As for those normal days, RedEye set out to get to the bottom of where and when it's OK to go the Full Monty. LVIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

Barely legal

Streakers, beware: Police can arrest or ticket people caught naked in public.

According to state law, public indecency, a misdemeanor, is lewd exposure of the body with intent to arouse or satisfy sexual desires at a public place—any place where the conduct is "reasonably" expected to be seen by others.

Chicago's municipal code prohibits exposure of any area covered up by underwear or "any portion of the breast at or below the upper edge of the areola" of a woman in public. Violators could be fined $100 to $500 if they show those parts when sunbathing or walking in any public park, playground, beach (including the waters), school, municipal building or public way.

On the beach

On vacation last spring with her sister and mom, Amy Beyer, 22, steered clear of topless and nude beaches in Italy. "I don't want to see old-lady boobs," said Beyer, who lives in Roscoe Village. "It's OK to be topless if you're lying facedown on the beach," she said.

She doesn't have to worry about seeing beachgoers sunbathe topless in the city: It's forbidden at all Chicago beaches.

But Brooke Leban, 27, of Downers Grove said a topless beach in Chicago "would be nice, because then you could tan without lines."

Bottom line: Keep your tops and bottoms on at Chicago beaches. Don't forget the sunblock if you visit Illinois' only nudist resort: Blue Lake Resort in Erie, near the Quad Cities.

In yoga class

Imagine being in the downward dog position in yoga class ... naked.

In the Bare Essentials naked yoga class in Rogers Park, students practice the same poses they would if wearing clothes, said yoga therapist Per Erez.

Naked yoga can promote body acceptance and positive body image, he said. Shedding clothes is not just about nudity, he said. Erez says he screens clients to ensure a safe, non-sexual environment at the studio.

Bottom line: If you're comfortable, register for the men-only class. If not, buy a DVD and try naked yoga at home.

At the gym

After changing in the men's locker room at the gym, Mike Amato, 30, looked up and was sorry he did. The sight he'd rather forget: an older gentleman fresh out of the shower standing in front of the mirror blow-drying his hair with his belly and everything else hanging out. "It's like a train wreck. You want to avert your eyes, but you really can't," Amato, who lives in Edison Park, said.

Bottom line: You might get looks if you're just hanging out in the nude. Also, "personal space triples," said advice columnist Harlan Cohen, author of "The Naked Roommate."

On the street

Tyler Long, 21, wore only a backpack, shoes, a hat and American flag pasties on his chest as he rode in the World Naked Bike Ride last year. Bystanders cheered and even tried to join him.

"You'll see people running out of bars and trying to unlock their bikes and trying to take their clothes off at the same time. It's just comical," said Long, a student living in Logan Square.

Also comical: streaking. "I'll laugh, but in the back of my mind, it's just wrong," said Marcus Wright, 23, who lives in Hyde Park. "I'm not used to everybody showing everything and running and hollering down the street."

Bottom line: Undress at your own risk, because you can get in trouble with the police for indecent exposure.

At home

Mike Cassidy, 29, of Andersonville waits until he's home alone to get fully comfortable. He strips his clothes off and relaxes without being restricted by pants or underwear. "It's not about exposure, shock or awe. It's about the freedom," he said.

But be considerate if you have roommates.

"In my apartment, I'd have a hard time if my roommate was walking around with no clothes on. I'd be freaked out," said Cara Murray, 27, who works in human resources and lives in Bucktown.

Bottom line: You might want to draw your shades. If you live with someone, "put a towel down, [and] don't scratch yourself and then handle the remote control," Cohen said.

Naked meter

Celebrities have undressed for photo shoots and movie roles. And many boast those aren't the only times they get naked.

RedEye ranks the stars who show the most skin to the ones who swear to cover up.

Exhibitionist: "Oh yeah, bro, I love playing drums naked. Who doesn't like comfort and music?" —Matthew McConaughey in Feb. 2008 issue of Playboy

Stripped: "A big whole year, we just celebrated our first anniversary and on Sundays we just do everything in the house and we're just cozy and laid-back, we don't need to go anywhere. We're just with each other and have naked Sundays. We do everything naked. We cook naked." —Christina Aguilera in Feb. 2007 on "The Ellen DeGeneres Show"

Baring it all: "I tend to sleep in the nude. ... When I'm in my own private space, I do spend time with very little on." —Padma Lakshmi in May 2009 issue of Allure

Partly clothed: "I'll strip down to my underwear and my Uggs boots when I eat lunch in my trailer." —Eliza Dushku in May 2009 issue of Allure

Cover girl: "I think I won't do it again: a) I can't keep getting away with it, and b) I don't want to become 'that actress who always gets her kit off.'" —Kate Winslet in Feb. 2009 issue of Time

Team Luna

Real-life best friends reunite on the soccer field for 'Rudo y Cursi'

By Alexia Elejalde-Ruiz
REDEYE

As international heartthrobs go, Gael Garcia Bernal and Diego Luna may be Mexico's finest exports.

So imagine a gal's glee when given the chance to interview the pair—in person!

Then imagine the gal's dismay when the publicist e-mails to say that Bernal is “feeling under the weather” and can't make the interview.

Tragic.

While RedEye wasn't able to personally witness the Luna-Bernal magic that first hit movie screens in 2001's “Y Tu Mama Tambien,” it's on full display in their new movie, “Rudo y Cursi.” It's their first film together since the coming-of-age flick launched the pair into the global spotlight.

In “Rudo y Cursi,” which opens Friday, Luna and Bernal play brothers nicknamed, respectively, “Rudo” (tough) and “Cursi” (corny). They're living on a banana plantation in rural Mexico when a talent scout, impressed with their soccer skills, offers to recruit one of the brothers to play professionally in Mexico City.

They let a penalty kick decide who goes, and Cursi wins—much to the ire of Rudo, who dreams of becoming a soccer player. Cursi, on the other hand, dreams of being a singer. Bernal performs a Spanish-language version of Cheap Trick's “I Want You to Want Me” in a pink-and-blue spangled outfit and cowboy hat.

The movie, written and directed by Carlos Cuarón, who also wrote “Y Tu Mama Tambien,” is about the bonds of brotherhood and the pitfalls of sudden fame and fortune.

As Luna and Cuarón devoured a late lunch on a recent Friday, Luna said that the movie doesn't reflect his relationship with Bernal, his best friend since childhood.

“Really, there's no competition [between us] at all,” he said. “First of all, we are friends, not brothers. So we choose to see each other.”

Luna, 29, and Bernal, 30, have followed similar paths in the eight years since “Y Tu.” Both now have infant sons (born within months of each other); both have directed their own movies (which were released at the same time); and both have starred in Oscar-winning films (Bernal in “Babel” and Luna in “Milk”). They also jointly founded a production company, Canana, that focuses on Mexican- and Latin American-themed films.

Luna said he could tell that they'd matured when they reunited for the new film.

BRIAN J. MOROWCZYNSKI FOR REDEYE

“I like putting it this way,” Luna said. “In ‘Y Tu Mama Tambien,’ we were not in control of what we were doing ... Alfonso [Cuarón, the director and Carlos' brother] had to push us many times back into track because we would get out of track easily. And this time, we were much more in control.”

Cuarón said Bernal and Luna complement each other as actors. Bernal, who went to theater school in London, is more technical, while Luna, acting since he was a toddler, is more instinctual.

“They have this weird chemistry that saves you thousands of years of rehearsals,” Cuarón said.

And who's the better soccer player?

“None of them,” Cuarón said. “They are both bad.”

Luna said Cuarón doesn't know what he's talking about.

“I'm glad Carlos is not in control of the national team of Mexico, because otherwise we wouldn't be able to reach the World Cup,” he said. “This guy doesn't know how to see futbol. Everything he calls a mistake is what others call talent.”

While their characters struggle with the inflated egos and recklessness that can come with sudden fame, Luna said he and Bernal have found success slowly enough to feel grounded.

“Because you've gotten so many no's, you've hit so many walls ... once success comes, you know you worked for it,” Luna said. “It's been a long run, and it hasn't been great all the time. And it can always go wrong again and we know that.” AELEJALDERUIZ@TRIBUNE.COM

JUST FOR KICKS

To prepare for his role in “Rudo y Cursi,” Diego Luna trained with pro soccer players. The experience changed the die-hard soccer fan's perception of the sport. “They care about other stuff when they're playing,” Luna said. “You find many players who say, ‘I play against the fans, I hate the fans,’ and things like that. And you don't even imagine that when you're watching.” A.E.R.

STAR TREK

@danheinz: Star Trek gets a B- from me. Not a big sci-fi fan. This movie was good, more action than science and drama. Worth the $10

@neil411: Loved Star Trek, except one thing: Uhura and Spock?

Totally not believable.

@FrostKL: Trekkilicious! Great new action and alternate storyline while still keeping the essence and appeal of the characters.

@danorleans: Star trek was great but I kept waiting for spock to cut somebodys forehead open @Caitlin_Mullen: "Star Trek" was highly entertaining even for those with no previous "ST" knowledge. Was never once bored. Great cast!

@pilsenite: all i can say is that i wouldn't turn down a mind meld or more with zachary quintro! live long & prosper

OBSESSED

@BVAX: Beyonce's "Obsessed" was a journey in predictability.

celikins: B. Definitely more of a chick flick. Beyonce is believable but Larter makes the film. Provides great post movie convo

OTHER FLICKS

@DTsupra30: ghost of girlfriends past made me forget about Matthew M's other terrible films. He is a great actor @theladypastor: Wolverine: Strangely alluring claws of steel on man of muscles. Slightly cheese-ball but enjoyable.

@renaenoelle: Valentino Inside look at world of Haute Couture. Showcases day 2 day life of fashion icon. Funny moments 2, like dogs getting teeth brushed!

Management (R)

You just never know when someone will turn your life around. Uninspired art saleswoman Sue (Jennifer Aniston) learns this during a business trip when she lets motel night manager Mike (Steve Zahn) touch her butt and then indulges him a quickie. What's the big deal? Mike falls for her hard, tracking her down again and refusing to give up until she'll agree to be with him. Uncomfortable conversations, skydiving and outside-bedroom-singing ensue.

The buzz: Theoretically, writer-director Stephen Belber's "Management" shouldn't work: It's considerably quirky and revolves around a guy most women would just find weird. Hopefully the film, which has seen a few release dates come and go, can generate some sympathy for oddball outsiders and become the polar opposite of forced junk like "Gigantic."

The verdict: Showing that Mike isn't a creep but just a well-intentioned guy without an internal compass, Zahn makes you believe in persistent, irrational love—and that he belongs with someone like Sue, whose self-perception is all out of whack. As Zahn and Aniston bond, this sublime little movie's humor takes you by surprise, underplaying jokes and maximizing laughs in a way that's simultaneously familiar and fresh.

Angels & Demons (PG-13)

Cool: In this sequel to "The Da Vinci Code," Robert Langdon's (Tom Hanks) hair no longer looks ridiculous, and two-thirds of the movie isn't spent with its characters standing around and explaining everything. (It's more like half the movie this time.)

Not cool: "Angels & Demons" is even worse than Ron Howard's 2006 adaptation of Dan Brown's "Da Vinci Code." Where the first film at least floated some thought-provoking ideas, "Angels" turns its church vs. science plot into a laughable and completely unexciting grudge match between the mind and the heart. (Four Vatican Cardinals are kidnapped, and an anti-religion group of intellectuals may be behind it. Ooh!)

Hanks turns in another absent-minded performance in which he just runs around and says "Oh my God" a lot. (Is Langdon Hanks' kryptonite or what?) His decipher-the-symbols-before-a-bomb-explodes scavenger hunt isn't as gripping as the slowest moments of Howard's "Frost/Nixon." This is a summer movie? More like a sleeping pill.

Want a primary care doctor in the Loop? Our downtown doctors are convenient and connected.

Advanced expertise. Compassionate care. Access to leading-edge technology and treatments. It's academic medicine at its best, and it's what you can expect from primary care physicians at Rush. And if you live or work downtown, there's a primary care physician from Rush close by.

Why is a primary care doctor so important?

Everyone benefits from coordinated health care and regular visits with a primary care doctor. They provide everything from immunizations to management of diabetes and high blood pressure to care for the flu and the common cold.

Hannah Spearritt and Andrew-Lee Potts star in "Primeval."
BBC AMERICA

TV 'Primeval'

8 p.m. Saturday, BBC America

The British monster mash returns with new characters, new crises and most of all, new and bigger, badder beasts. In the season premiere, Nick Cutter and his team of dinosaur-finders are racing to close time/space anomalies that allow the prehistoric creatures to cross into our world. Yeah, it's a silly premise—but loads of fun. And if you want human foes, you've got them. This twisty tale is a conspiracy lover's dream. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE » Haven't seen the first season of "Primeval?" It airs at 9 p.m. Fridays on Sci Fi.

GAMES

Excitebots Trick Racing

$39.99 for Nintendo Wii

This racer from the Monster Games studio is flat-out weird. The vehicles are robotic animals that can morph into a lumbering, two-legged behemoth. The inventive racetracks are filled with obstacles and leaps, and you earn stars by executing midair stunts. Occasionally, your bot will sprout an arm that lets you play a midrace minigame, such as throwing darts, bowling or hitting a clown with a pie. Such inspired lunacy makes for a very lively party game. LOU KESTEN, AP

SINUS ISSUES?

Breathe Well Again!

Millions of Americans suffer with chronic sinusitis, nasal congestion and seasonal allergies. Experts at the Ear, Nose and Throat Center at Mercy Hospital can provide relief and much more for these common, but debilitating concerns.

Providing a full spectrum of Ear, Nose, and Throat (ENT) care in one convenient location, Mercy's multi-disciplinary team utilizes advanced diagnostic imaging tools to aid in the detection and treatment of ENT disorders. Mercy ENT physicians are board certified and are trained in both surgical and non-surgical treatments of ENT conditions. When surgery is required, patients can rest assured that all non-surgical avenues have been considered, and that the most advanced minimally invasive techniques will be utilized.

With proper treatment, most sinus and nasal problems can be greatly improved. The experts at the Mercy Ear, Nose and Throat Center are here to provide exceptional care and advanced solutions. Schedule an appointment today and breathe well again.

Calling all momshells: Get hot post-baby body

Associated Press

Do you know where your pre-baby body went?

With a little effort, it's not far off, says fitness pro Tracy Anderson, whose A-list clients include Madonna and Gwyneth Paltrow. Whether you're a new mom or a veteran, the key is to set aside time for exercise and keep your practice consistent, Anderson says. The payoff? A fitter body, calmer mind and happier mom.

"It's so easy to think that taking that time is selfish, but really it's giving you and your entire family the greatest gift you can give: your health and mental well-being," she said.

Anderson developed her dance-inspired fitness program after gaining 60 pounds while pregnant. It's never too late to start moving, she says, and new moms—or those new to exercise—can begin with just 15 minutes per day.

"You can change your muscular structure. I don't care what your genetics are," she said. "You can get rid of the fat and pull the muscles together."

It took Paltrow "a long time" to build endurance, Anderson says, and now the actress has one of the most envied bodies in the business.

Thanks to Paltrow, one mom can win a personal training program with Anderson as part of Johnson's Baby Celebrity Hand-Me-Down auction, which benefits charity. But even those who don't bid can try the trainer's tips:

» Don't think you need to lose weight before you start exercising.

» Find a workout that fits your schedule. "It may be unrealistic for a new mom to drive to the gym and have a trainer," Anderson said. "Start with 15 minutes a day and work up to doing something at home for 45 minutes a day."

» "Have a practical idea in your mind of how you want your body to look and work toward that goal," she says.

» Find a workout that fits your budget and lifestyle. Anderson will offer free and low-cost downloadable workouts on her Web site beginning June 1. "There's no equipment," she said. "You need me and a mat or towel. That's it."

» Move your body six days a week: "Three days a week is not OK," Anderson said.

» Be consistent. Stick with your program and you'll see results, which inspires further progress.

Hot & horny & looking for ...

Is seeking legal, consensual sex online any different than seeking it at bars?

Craigslist solution stops online solicitations! Or not ...

They did it! Problem solved! After all, it's not like the entire Internet is more or less an unregulated backwater of sexual perversion. With this defeat of Craigslist's “erotic services,” there is little chance other savvy entrepreneurs will figure out another way to sell sex on the Web. I certainly can't think of any disturbingly vile pornography sites to tide people over, and I doubt I'll get any kind of pop-up ads from fake women asking me to “meet” them in Chicago on, say, Facebook or MySpace. I definitely don't think I could find a chat room that serves all kinds of revolting fetishes. Yes, this partnership between state governments and private enterprise has once and for all solved the problem of degrading online sexual behavior.

STEPHEN MARKLEY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Bars are scarier than Internet

There's no difference between using Craigslist or your local bar to troll for sex—except Craigslist is being singled out because it's on the big, scary Internet. Lawmakers fear the Web more than they understand it. Yes, a small number of sexual encounters that ended in violence originated on the site. Hundreds of people are killed after encounters at bars every year, yet no sheriff's demanding watering holes across the country be closed down to prevent the tragedies. The world will be no safer now that Craigslist is deleting their hookup ads; there are still a zillion cyberspace and real-world locales for you to find other sexual adventurers. Just watch yourself if you choose to go down that road. UPTOWN GRRRL JENNI SPINNER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Web lets you get specific

Casual sex is solicited everywhere—clubs, online dating sites, grocery stores. An old man once tried to get me to leave Sephora with him. (I continued shopping for lip gloss.) It's all OK, as long as no money changes hands. However, depending on the perversity of the request, there can be a distinct difference between soliciting casual sex in a bar and placing an ad on any Web site. In a bar, the hurdle to cross is simply getting someone to follow you home. You're not really sure if your new friend will honor your request of domination while dressed like Tinkerbell—and maybe you're afraid to ask, for fear of the public in-your-face rejection. People who place ads can let it all hang out, so to speak. They can be as specific as they want and assume that anyone who responds to their ad is down for whatever. Fortunately for those people, the “casual encounters” section of Craigslist still is going strong. THE GINA SPOT COLUMNIST GINA B. IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Future college professor, Amauriana, age 3, Marillac Early Childhood Program, Chicago

“If you think Illinois needs smart students,
then get behind me.”

Right here in preschool. At least, that's what decades of solid research say. Good early childhood programs prepare little kids like me for a lifetime of big successes. I'm more likely to do well in school, stay out of trouble, graduate and land a good job. That's not all. Did you know that every $1 invested in quality early childhood education can save up to $7 of taxpayer money by reducing the need for remedial and special education, welfare, and criminal justice services?

That's why helping more young children like me get off to a good start is a very smart investment for everyone in Illinois.

Visit www.voices4kids.org for an easy way to thank your state representatives for their continued support of quality early childhood education in the next state budget.

'Hills' hangers-on dish on Cavallari

It's official: Kristin Cavallari is replacing Lauren Conrad on "The Hills."

That's according to ew.com, who reported Thursday that Conrad's former "Laguna Beach" castmate will appear in 10 episodes this fall in addition to a spot on the May 31 season finale on MTV. (She catches Heidi Pratt's wedding bouquet. How convenient.)

So, after weeks of rumors, "Hills" fans finally can rest easy: MTV has replaced its often-dramatic, doe-eyed starlet with a new, younger, often-dramatic, doe-eyed starlet. What does the remaining cast have to say about it? Have a look! QUOTES FROM US WEEKLY

WHO IS KRISTIN CAVALLARI?

Kristin Cavallari was part of the perfectly tanned cast of teenagers on MTV's 2004 reality show "Laguna Beach," which served as a launching pad for Lauren Conrad—then L.C.—to star in "The Hills" and turned anyone involved into a tabloid sensation. On "Laguna," Kristin and L.C. were frenemies.

Age: 22

Fun fact: According to imdb.com, she lived in the Chicago area before moving to Laguna Beach to live with her dad and brother.

TV philosophy: "I'm not going into it like, 'I'm going to make great friendships with these people,'" she tells ew.com. "It's work! And drama sells."

Stephanie Pratt

"She's no Lauren Conrad. And she loves drama and catfights. I saw her on 'Laguna Beach.' I'm freaking out."

Translation: "I'm freaking out that she's gonna make 'The Hills' go into the tank the way she did with 'Laguna.'"

Audrina Patridge

"It'll add a little bit of spice to 'The Hills.'"

Translation: "Check out my straight-to-DVD release 'Into the Blue 2: The Reef.'"

Heidi Pratt

"I love Kristin."

Translation: "I hate Kristin."

Spencer Pratt

"Lauren didn't date a guy for three years ... Kristin's going to date three guys every day!"

Translation: "You better not mess this up for me, Cavallari."

Kristin Cavallari

Twitter ch-ch-changes

Now there's a switch. According to ew.com, Kristin Cavallari is replacing Lauren Conrad on "The Hills." So we asked RedEye's Twitter followers what they think of the news and—OMG!—they had some good responses. Become a star with RedEye at twitter.com/redeyechicago. COMPILED BY SCOTT KLEINBERG

@AndreaZemog

Like, eww, that show is totally "dunzo"!

@Megs723

Care little. no...wait...care not at all.

@AIIILibb

It will be fun to have the "original" bad girl back, but how exactly does she mold into this clique? It's kind of random.

@Just_Duckie

It's all Greek to me! (It's all fake anyways.) They will have no appeal/relatability with Kristin.

@Tamarastar18

She was "bigger" than Lauren on Laguna Beach so time for her to get her spotlight back!

@mpw14

MTV wants some serious bank ... This is your Laguna on Lauren :, this is your Laguna on Kristin :!!!!!! oh snap

@chicagostyle

I'm looking forward to the possibility of Kristin Cavallari, I'm tired of Lauren's martyr routine

Butler faces charges

Gerard Butler has been charged with misdemeanor criminal battery stemming from a scuffle with a photographer, The Associated Press reports. The incident in question occurred in the wee hours of Oct. 7, when the actor was leaving a premiere party for “RocknRolla.” Butler’s manager, Alan Siegel, said the actor had his driver stop the car after the paparazzo repeatedly sped through red lights and almost hit two pedestrians. If convicted, Butler could spend up to 6 months in the slammer.

Wanted

So LiLo’s house may have been targeted by thieves after all. Authorities are looking for two suspects in an attempted burglary Tuesday of Lindsay Lohan’s home, “Access Hollywood” reports. The duo were caught on tape, police said, adding they tried to pry open a back window and door but drove off when they couldn’t finish the job. In other news, she’s apparently still messy.

Star-studded comedic cast

Ray Liotta, Mila Kunis and Mark Ruffalo will be joining Tina Fey, Steve Carell, Mark Wahlberg and James Franco in the comedy “Date Night,” ew.com reports. Fey and Carell play a married couple, while Kunis will play the wife of Franco’s character. Ruffalo will play Carell’s best friend. Liotta’s character is described as a “villain of peace.”

Tyra, Tyra, Tyra

It’s Tyra Banks’ world, and most of us aren’t living in it. That’s how fired “America’s Next Top Model” judge Paula Porizkova describes her dismissal from the show, she tells “Access Hollywood.” “I’m not even sure she was aware that I existed way out there in Siberia,” Porizkova said in the interview that aired Thursday.

Spare any change?

Music monthly Paste is asking for donations to keep the mag afloat. Editor-in-chief Josh Jackson said he’s hoping to raise “in the low six figures.” The Associated Press reports. In exchange for a donation, the magazine is giving out exclusive tracks donated by artists like The Decemberists and Of Montreal.

THE VELVET ROPE

50 and Forest

Looks like 50 Cent (left) and Forest Whitaker (right) are two sides of the same coin—pun intended. They're attached to play leads in a film adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"—about split personality—Variety reports. Last week, The Hollywood Reporter said Keanu Reeves is attached to another project called "Jekyll."

Late shifts

Jay Leno is passing the "Tonight Show" torch—on air. Leno's last guest on the May 29 show also is his replacement: Conan O'Brien, NBC announced Thursday. O'Brien, who turned the network's "Late Night" over to Jimmy Fallon in March, becomes "Tonight" host on June 1.

On Broadway

The Tony Awards have nabbed NPH. Neil Patrick Harris will host this year's Broadway-honoring show airing June 7 on CBS. The "How I Met Your Mother" star—who has appeared on stage himself—said in a statement to The Associated Press he hopes "to help provide a first-class evening for all."

Party time!

Who says vampires don't age? "Twilight's" Robert Pattinson celebrated his 23rd birthday Wednesday with "New Moon" cast members including Kristen Stewart in Vancouver where they are filming, according to people.com.

Apparently, word got out on Twitter about where he was, and fans flocked there, people.com reported.

CHRISTIAN'S 'SALVATION'

AP FILE

Christian Bale doesn't care if you think he's a jerk.

"I don't feel like I have to explain, 'Well, I'm not really like this. I'm a wonderful guy and I have a lovely smile and how can you not like me?'" he tells Entertainment Weekly's May 22 issue. The mag asked about reaction to his rant on the set of "Terminator Salvation" that went viral in February.

"These things happen, and you don't realize how long you're going in the heat of the moment," he says. "I would just say: inexcusable, my fault, yes, I did it, no excuses."

Glass act

Danny Gokey says glasses "rained from the sky" during his "American Idol" run, which came to an end Wednesday. The bespectacled former contestant said on a conference call with usmagazine.com that he started with 15 pairs but now has about 50. He said—perhaps jokingly—he's considering starting his own line of specs in the future.
